The HUMOURIST. No. I.

——— ——— ———Læti
Dona ferunt, ——— ———
VIRGIL.

THE moſt volatile enjoy Hours of Reflection, and indeed Life muſt appear very burdenſome to that Man whoſe Genius is unable to chequer the grave with the ludicrous, the ſolemn with the Farce: A well tempered Mixture is ever the beſt, the one is a Relaxation for the other, and greatly contributes to render our Company acceptable in all ſocial Communications.

The Humouriſt was yeſterday ſerious; the Incident was fortunate, for whilſt he was employed in paſſing his yearly Accounts, and comparing a few Tranſactions of the former, with the paſt Year, he ſtumbled upon a Sentiment which carries with it an excellent Moral, and opportunely ſerves as an Introduction to that Revolution of Time, generally term'd a Year.

This is the Seaſon, wherein that laudable Cuſtom of preſenting Tokens of Friendſhip, has Time out of Mind prevailed: It is a Cuſtom as noble as it is ancient, and is undoubtedly grounded on the moſt perfect Reaſon, and eſtabliſhed by the beſt Examples.

A very limitted and confined Knowledge of the Ancients, will ſuffice to illuſtrate this Truth. If we look back upon the Jews, we ſhall find, that the Month of Niſan, the firſt of their Year, was dedicated to the Celebration of Feaſts, particularly that of the Paſſover, on which Occaſion they gave the moſt general Invitations to their Neighbours to the eating of [illegible]

[illegible] Mind will always be ambitious to acquire.

There is only one Thing wherein I ſhould take Pleaſure in ſeeing Mankind bear a Reſemblance to the Turks, and that is, by rejoicing with due Reverence at every new Moon, whoſe Creſcent they never fail to diſplay with the moſt grateful Acts of Kindneſs to each other.

In January and February, the Romans made Preſents to their Friends, and Romulus expreſsly commanded, that Vervine ſhould be offered with other Marks of mutual Reſpect, as the wiſeſt Method of inſuring to themſelves a ſucceſsful and happy Concluſion to the Year.

Tacitus tells us, that Tiberius fixed the Firſt of January as the proper Day, not only for the giving, but likewiſe for receiving, theſe Tokens of Eſteem.

We are apt to meaſure Love by the moſt extravagant Return of Favours, but if we conſider, that the Diſpenſations of Providence are too unequally divided, to allow each Man the ſame Power of Diſtribution, we ſhall regard more juſtly thoſe Marks of Gratitude, that, notwithſtanding they want the Stamp of regal Authority, do nevertheleſs bear upon them the Figure of a generous Mind; it is the Manner, not the Value, that diſtinguiſhes the Greatneſs of the Favour, it is the [illegible] and grateful Communication of our Gratitude, not the too liberal Profuſion, that renders the Gift an acceptable Boon.

Cuſtoms of this Nature can never meet with ſuitable Encouragement; all our Endeavours to promote them, will fall greatly ſhort of the Veneration in which they ought to be upheld.

Friendſhip is the Life of Man, the only Cement of Society, the only Pledge of true Felicity.

Theſe annual Gifts ſtrengthen and confirm our Alliances, and preſerve that Conformity of [illegible] which is the [illegible] of mutual [illegible].

A well [illegible] Friendſhip [illegible] the [illegible] Virtues, and entirely [illegible] from the human Heart, [illegible] Suſpicions.

With a Friend (not a Friend in common Acceptation) a Deſart loſes its Train of Horror, and only ſeems a bleſt Retirement.

It is evident, that the Ancients looked upon theſe Cuſtoms as promotive of the ſocial Duties, and as ſo many Obligations to the Performance of them. I am ſorry to ſay, that modern Elegance is endeavouring to ſuppreſs theſe noble Emanations, but I am far more grieved to own, that ſuch Virtues are incompatible with modern Graces.

It is with Sincerity I offer my Thoughts on this Subject, tho' far more unneceſſary in this Place (than in many others) where ſo noble a Generoſity, joined with an hoſpitable Dignity, prevails.

The greateſt Leſſons of Morality may be gathered from imbibing ſuch worthy Sentiments; they communicate Love to every Individual, and keep up an Harmony, without which the Order of Nature is inverted.

Theſe Gifts create a moſt happy Emulation amongſt the juvenile part of Mankind, and are ſo many Records of Friendſhip for the Fathers and the Grandfathers to tranſmit to Poſterity.

If theſe Hints meet with Approbation, I need not aſſure my Readers, that the Reward is more than adequate to my Trouble: And I dare affirm, that if any Exceptions are taken to the Method I purſue in treating upon this or any other Subject, they will be generouſly conſidered as Errors ariſing from a Defect of Judgment, not from a total Ignorance of what an honeſt Soul ought to dictate.

VERSES written in a young Lady's ALMANACK for the Year 1754.

And then's too late to love.

LONDON, September 29.

THIS day came on the election for a lord-mayor of this city for the enſuing Year, when Edward Ironſides, Eſq; alderman of cordwainer's ward, as being next the chair, was choſen.

Letters from Dreſden inſinuate, that in order to induce the king of Poland to accede to the triple alliance of the North, overtures have been made not only to procure the Poliſh crown for the electoral prince of Saxony at the next vacancy, but alſo to ſettle a younger brother of that houſe in the dutchy of Courland, as ſoon as a convenient opportunity ſhall offer, or whenever any attempts may be made to procure that dutchy for a brother of his Pruſſian majeſty.

Oct. 2. We hear his majeſty has been pleaſed to appoint Commodore Parry and Capt. Pringle commiſſioners of the navy.

Oct. 4. A reinforcement is ordered for the garriſons at Gibraltar and Port-Mahon.

It is ſaid they have diſcovered at Berlin the whole art of making china-ware without any particular clay or earth. The only material [illegible] is a kind of ſtone, which is common [illegible] prepared from [illegible] as well as the ſubſtance of the china, and after it is painted the [illegible] in a kind of varniſh, which [illegible] the colour and gives the air of [illegible] to the figures, without any [illegible] of a metallic [illegible]. Our laſt letters from the Hague acquaint us, that one ſet of politicians think there is a great probability of ſeeing Prince Xavier of Saxony elected duke of Courland, and that others think this incompatible with ſome late intelligence from the North.

Oct. 13. The board of works have purchaſed ſome ground adjoining to Cotton-Garden, in order to make a more commodious ſpot for building the new houſe of lords and commons.

Oct. 6. Private letters from Holland inform us of the determination of an important law ſuit, which has been decided in a manner that was never heard of in that country. A cauſe had been depending for three years between the Eaſt-India company, and one Francis Canters, who having been in the company's ſervice in India, had amaſſed conſiderable riches, and returning to Holland, was arreſted at Amſterdam by the directors of the company, who accuſed him of miſdemeanors, and commenced a proſecution againſt him. Canters being caſt was ſtript of his wealth; but, not diſcouraged by this reverſe of fortune, he petitioned the States General, that they, as the ſovereigns, who have the right of judging ſuch caſes in the laſt reſort, would reviſe the ſentence. His petition was granted; and their high mightineſſes, in order to pronounce the final ſentence, agreeable to juſtice and the laws, nominated all the counſellor penſionaries of the nineteen towns in the province of Holland to make the reviſion. Theſe gentlemen having met in a body on the firſt inſtant, at nine in the [illegible]
